

Outreach at the Faculty of Phylology Blaze Koneski

October 22nd and 27th, 2009

The American Corner Skopje staff and the Peace Corps Volunteer Vince Drader visited the Faculty of Phylology for an outreach presentation. Approximately 120 students from the Department of English language and Literature were informed about the services the American Corner has to offer and the different programs organized. Nevenka Steafnovska, the Resource Center Specialist encouraged everyone present to become a member.

The Educational Adviser, Gordana Mircic spoke about the services of the American Educational Center, the upcoming November program and the educational exchange opportunities for Macedonian citizens. The students were invited to attend the Graduate seminar in November and all of the events organized during International Education Week or to schedule an appointment for individual or group advising sessions.

The culture of tattoos, a mystery for most of the students was presented by Vince Drader. The origin, history of tatoos, reasons why people decide to get a tatoon and the risk factors were briefly exemplified by Mr. Drader who showed his own tatoos commemorating a certain aspect of life, especially the one referring to his stay in Macedonia.
